Chef Joseph's adds some elegance to Downtown lunch [The Indianapolis Star]

(Indianapolis Star (IN) Via Acquire Media NewsEdge) Nov. 25-- Looking for an elegant lunch spot to seal a deal? Local event planner John Mays has created one at 115 E. Ohio St.

Chef Joseph's at the Connoisseur Room opened last week. According to the restaurant's website, it offers "a full service fine-dining luncheon providing business professionals an opportunity to wine and dine their clients in a sophisticated atmosphere." Despite the casual nature of today's dining scene, Mays saw a need for a little lunchtime elegance.

"We were looking for a niche to fill in Indianapolis," said Mays, the new restaurant's owner/proprietor (he also owns Savoir Fare, an event-planning and staffing firm).

With its two-story wine cellar, plush banquettes, black tablecloths and baby grand piano, Chef Joseph's at the Connoisseur Room certainly delivers on the elegance.

"It's a great space, very conducive to conducting business," Mays said.

With chef Joseph Heidenreich -- formerly of Agio -- in the kitchen, the food is sure to deliver as well.

And with small plates such as smoked salmon on savory pancakes with sour cream and caviar at $8.95, and sandwiches such as an Angus steak burger at $9.95, the elegance remains affordable, Mays said. The priciest entree on the menu, Moroccan lamb meatloaf with mashed potatoes and green beans, is $13.95.

"You don't have to spend a fortune to have a great experience," he said.

Chef Joseph's at the Connoisseur Room is open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday; private dining also is available. For more information, go to chefjosephs.com or call (317) 600-3577.

Fondue comes to Loft It seems like a natural.

Traders Point Creamery's Loft restaurant, 9101 Moore Road, near Zionsville, recently added fondue to its winter menu.

Made from a trio of cheeses -- Swiss, cheddar and the creamery's award-winning Fleur de la Terre -- the appetizer ($18) serves two and comes with fresh vegetables, apple slices and toasted French bread bites.

More fondue options will likely appear soon -- maybe even a lobster version.

Also look for more cheeses from the creamery's cheesemaker Lindsay Klaunig, who attended the American Cheese Society conference in August and came home eager to create new varieties.

Her first batches of a tomme-style cheese, which has a rustic rind and a creamy-crumbly interior, are ready now. Klaunig's "bloomies," surface-ripened lactic-style cheeses with a creamy center, are back as well. She's also aging several batches of a raw milk feta and a blue cheese.

The Fleur de la Terre and the bloomies, Klaunig says, will be available all winter; others will be in limited supply. For information, go to traderspointcreamery.com or call (317) 733-1700.

Say si to Fountain Square Mexican food fans now have another Fountain Square option. La Margarita Restaurant and Tequila Bar opened recently in the Murphy Arts Center, 1043 Virginia Ave.

With the same menu as its 9435 N. Meridian St. location, the new spot also has an expanded tequila bar. Next summer, an outdoor "tequila garden" will open adjacent to the Cultural Trail.

The restaurant is open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily. For information, visit lablogarita .blogspot.com.

Getting to the Greek For Greek and Mediterranean fare Downtown, check out Ali Baba Cafe, which opened last month at 115 W. Market St. (That's the address on the cafe's Facebook page, but there's also an entrance at 50 N. Illinois St.) The restaurant is open from 10:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday, and noon to 9 p.m. Sunday. Call (317) 632-1111.

$2,500? It's possible The recent "Cooking: Possible" show with celeb chef Robert Irvine at Clowes Hall raised more than $2,500 for the Mozel Sanders Foundation's annual Thanksgiving dinner, said Clowes director of marketing Joshua Lingenfelter.

The host of the Food Network show "Kitchen: Impossible" was "incredibly nice," Lingenfelter said.

A crowd of about 500 -- significantly fewer than the 2,000 hoped for -- allowed Irvine to interact with the audience, Lingenfelter said. Seats on stage for a five-course meal were auctioned off, and Irvine circulated among the audience helping to drive up bids.

This was the first time Irvine had presented this type of show, and he seemed to enjoy it, Lingenfelter said.

"He stayed until midnight signing autographs for folks," he said.

Winter markets There are more and more winter farmers markets opening in the area.

The Winter Market at Carmel City Center opened last weekend. You'll find its 15 to 20 vendors at 719 Hanover Place inside Carmel City Center, at City Center Drive and Range Line Road. Surface parking is available on the plaza level, accessible from City Center Drive, and in the underground garage.

For information, go to carmelcitycenter/wintermarket.

Binford Farmers Market, at 62nd Street and Binford Boulevard, will host its indoor holiday markets from 9 a.m. to noon Dec. 3 and Dec. 10.
